50X1-HUM

[REDACTED] there was a review of the Soviet Navy in Murmansk on the occasion of Soviet Navy Day. Soviet naval craft arrived from the open sea and docked [REDACTED]

50X1-HUM

A. Four destroyers: These were modern ships, but it was evident that they had already been in commission for some time. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] they were units of the former German or Italian navies. Two heavy destroyers were equipped with radar. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] For details of the radar installations, see sketches No. 2 and No. 3

50X1-HUM

B. Four submarines: Two submarines were identical, as though of serial production. The other two differed from the former two and did not resemble each other either. They were presumed to be ex-German submarines. In appearance they most closely resembled the Polish submarine ZBIK.

C. Trawlers: These exhibited various silhouettes. They included units of Soviet production and ex-German units. Soviet trawlers were identical and smaller than the ex-German ones.

50X1-HUM

D. Six MTBs
